

Kyah and Zara's Trust

On May 17th, 2009 seven year old Kyah and her four year old sister Zara were involved in a life changing car accident. Zara was fortunate enough to suffer only from a broken foot (for which she now has a pretty pink cast) and is now in the care of her family. Kyah was less fortunate experiencing multiple critical and life threatening injuries. Both beautiful girls suffered immense trauma as a result of the event. Thanks to nearly immediate response from passers by, EMT, and life flight Kyah survived the accident but faces a long road to recovery. She surprises us all with daily improvements thanks to an outpouring of prayers, thoughts, and the dedication of her medical team.

Thanks to the efforts of our neighbors and their employers a trust has been established to help with their medical bills and ongoing care. The girls and their family face a lifetime of medical, emotional, and rehabilitative care and need your support. This trust will ensure that they receive the best ongoing care despite financial barriers. Already we have seen an overwhelming outpouring of emotional support in the form of prayers, positive thoughts, donations, and personal care from friends, family, complete strangers, and medical personnel. Please help us make sure that Kyah and Zara can continue to afford the treatment they have been receiving.
